Senator Miles' Statement on Las Vegas

"Late last night, a gunman took the lives of at least 58 and injured more than 500 who were out to enjoy a night in Las Vegas. Our hearts and prayers go to those whose loved ones were touched by this tragedy.

While authorities are compiling the facts, medical personnel are treating the injured and families and friends search for their loved ones, we must come together as a nation to once again have a conversation about gun violence. More must be done to prevent these senseless mass shootings. We must continue the conversation begun by former President Barack Obama on who has access to assault weapons, gun violence, how it impacts our communities and taking action to prevent these incidents in the future."
