I am not a statistician or a computer expert. I am a retired judge who believes that election systems, just like judicial systems, should be fair to the people they serve, in this case the voters, and they should definitely not be RIGGED in advance so the outcome is predetermined. The drafters of these maps are too clever to say they want to discriminate. But how can it be fair when virtually all of the population growth in the past decade was people of color who moved to urban areas, yet somehow white, rural voters get more seats. This makes minority votes count less than white votes. It is not fair and, sadly, you know it is not fair.
