Message:

I have looked at the proposed new map of Senate districts for Texas. Populous counties do look to this unschooled observer to fit the conception of gerrymandering. And I wonder why? It seems cynical to suppose that such great effort needs to be placed in tinkering, when various objective algorithms are available which would give the effort credibility and may actually not be particularly favorable to either party. And when so much internet speech has been devoted to election rigging by the left, why give the left a valid claim to election rigging by the right?
