Message:

I am very disheartened by what is happening in my home state. After spending most of my life in three other states, I moved back to Texas to care for my ailing parents.

Since getting back, I have been blown away by one problem after another. Texans are the victims of poor leadership — people who don't use good judgment and don't listen to the folks who put them in office. Now that they are in, they are running roughshod and doing what THEY want, not what the PEOPLE want!

The majority of Texans support vaccination, the wearing of face masks during a public health crisis, having a power grid that actually works, being able to cast a vote by mail (or without other hassles) and the right to safe abortion. The recent spate of decisions by the Legislature serve to highlight how out of touch our elected officials are with the Texas electorate.

The current gerrymandering is an attempt to keep the true voices of Texans from being heard. I expect my one vote to carry its true weight, not to be lost in the gerrymandered sauce of voters who may not live in my community, nor care about the same issues that I care about. Texans don't want Californians making decisions for them. Therefore, this gerrymandering is WRONG. It robs Texans of their voting rights. Please stop playing games with our lives!
