Affirm public info: I agree

Regarding: Congressional

Message:

Redistributing of congressional districts happens after a census has been taken and is intended to improve representation for constituents given demographic changes in that district. The census provides factual information that should be used to improve fair and effective representation. This most certainly is not the case in Texas right now, and yet your Republican representatives and Governor are attempting what is clearly a power grab by distorting districts to serve their purposes. This is so destructive to the foundation of representational government upon which our country is built upon.

As a fellow American I am distraught at the injustice of this move. I live in New Jersey and therefore can only hope and pray for protections to the democratic process in Texas. And can only celebrate the courage of your lawmakers that are working to oppose this very unfair, unjust and ultimately destructive redistributing effort now underway.

I urge you to truly serve the needs of the people of Texas and wait until the next census, five years from now, when you will have real data upon which to make more fair and effective representation decisions. Your actions in your state will eventually be felt here in my state, and we, as all Americans, have a duty to serve each other with truth and compassion and to protect our precious democracy.

Sincerely,

Daniel Gordon
