Message:

My name is Erin Mills, I am a born and raised Texan and have lived in Texas my entire life. I am absolutely appalled at the measures that our government is taking in an effort to gerrymander our state. The current congressional district maps were already approved by a republican government and now you are trying to cheat to win more votes instead of letting the actual voices of Texans be heard.

If you want republican votes then perhaps you should go back to the republican values in the time before MAGA and be actual republicans that value honesty, dignity, and a courage to represent your constituents. If you carried more values for all people of Texas, I don't think you would have to feel like you needed to cheat to win. This just shows that you are scared that you are going to lose congressional seats during the next election. Instead of cheating you need to use this time to course correct the Republican Party in Texas and become a party of the people that values voices from real Texans instead of listening to the loud maga talking heads that are in it for power and greed instead of representing the values of actual people. Everyone around me from my son -who just turned 18 and can't wait to vote in the next election, to my husband - who had never been really political, to my 70 year old mother and father -in-law who used to vote republican until the party turned into the party of MAGA, can't wait to vote in the next election and try to vote out all of you congressmen that don't represent us anymore. We don't want bibles in schools, because our bibles should be in church. We want healthcare for women because we should trust Texan women to make decisions based on the information from her doctor and not her congressman. We should take care of our own people and land and ensure we will have a future for our children. These all used to be things that republicans cared about once. I hope every congressperson votes against the redistricting of our state because it goes against all of us Texans. Let our actual voices be heard.
