Message:

To the Senate Special Committee on Congressional Redistricting,

As a Christian pastor and engaged community member, I vehemently oppose this process of political gerrymandering for the non-emergent purpose of gaining Republican seats in Congress. The end does not justify the means. Redrawing district lines to avoid a midterm slump for one political party is American politics at its worst.

Politicians should earn our votes with wisdom, integrity, courage, morality, policy, and persuasion that they are the best candidate. But by redistricting Texas solely for partisan ends, the ruling party of our state is dodging the democratic process and choosing for us.

When State legislators choose partisanship over leadership, our communities feel it. Choices like this continue to raise the tide of division in our state. Please, do not redistrict Texas' congressional lines.

Sincerely,
Graydon Jones
