Dear Texas Senate:

Please do not waste taxpayer dollars and congress's valuable time with redistricting right now. If you must partake in such a ridiculous waste of time, please do it after the more important issues have been addressed, Education and Flood/ Weather warning systems.

How can you possibly sleep at night knowing that you can help to prevent another flood disaster like the ones on Central Texas rivers in July of this year and doing absolutely nothing? Over 100 people died in the flooding. You have the power to improve the warning systems but instead choose to play juvenile political games.

Clearly, you do not care about the future of Texas at all. If you did, you would spend the special session time to address the pending education issues. Your short-sightedness is truly amazing.

You should be ashamed of yourselves for not addressing these issues immediately. If you truly care about our great state, please prove me wrong and do not waste time with the redistricting and focus instead on the items that are really important to Texans.

Respectfully,

Greg Brooks
