My family has deep roots in Texas, hailing from Clyde and Comanche since the 1800s. My dad retired from the military after 20 years and serving in Vietnam, where he was exposed to Agent Orange.

He passed away from complications in 2018, but he was proud of the US.

He believed everyone should have a voice. He believed in fairness, kindness, and looking after each other. He believed in doing the right thing. He believed that people could disagree and still be friends.

But most importantly, he believed firmly in the constitution. He taught me to believe in it, too.

My belief has faltered recently as we've watched our current leaders ignore the constitution. But I still hope that those who originally committed to serving the public good and representing all their constituents, not just the ones who voted for them, will step forward to do the right thing, regardless of political pressure from others.

It can be hard, I know. It takes courage. And a strong belief that doing what is right is always necessary.

I hope you are someone who doesn't cave to peer pressure. Who can step back and recognize that redrawing the districts to favor (even more than it does) Republican votes, means your daughter or niece or son or gay next door neighbor, or maybe wife, won't have a voice. It will be lost.

One of our core beliefs has always been no taxation without representation. Redistricting so these folks don't have a voice violates that very precept.

It violates one of our most core beliefs as Americans. It violates the very ideals by which our country was originally formed.

I hope you stand up and do the right thing and honor the constitution like you have pledged.
