Message:

My name is Jessica, and I'm a proud resident of ZIP code 77056, in Texas Congressional District 07. I strongly oppose the special session on redistricting.

Let's be clear: this session isn't about fair representation — it's about political manipulation. Even national Republican leaders have said the quiet part out loud — that the goal is to redraw the maps to gain up to five more Republican seats. That's not democracy — that's rigging the system.

I live in TX-07, a competitive, diverse, and growing district that includes parts of central and west Houston. It was redrawn in 2021 in a way that already altered its balance. Now, you're coming for it again — not because of population shifts or fairness — but because of raw political ambition.

This is a mid-decade redistricting effort, done outside of the normal census cycle, and Texans see it for what it is: a blatant power grab. It's an insult to voters who expect fair elections and a government that serves people, not parties.

We, the voters of Texas, deserve districts that reflect our communities, not maps drawn behind closed doors to serve partisan interests.

I urge this body to stop wasting taxpayer dollars and legislative time on this effort. Instead of fixing what isn't broken, we should be addressing real issues like disaster recovery, education, and infrastructure.

A healthy democracy requires fair maps, competitive elections, and trust in the process. This redistricting special session erodes all three.

I ask you to do what's right — not what's politically convenient. Reject this power grab. Respect our votes. Restore our trust.
