Message:

Show us, the public, the proposed maps. Until we see what has been drafted behind closed doors, we can't know how any of us will be impacted. This needs to have a very bright light shining on it or the backlash will be horrific. As it stands right now, hearings are being held with zero to comment on. Are there going to be hearings once the maps are released--as absolutely should be the case? When, how many, where? Or will there be none--just votes down party lines to put the maps into place? If so, this cannot be called "representative democracy" any longer.
