Message:

I firmly disagree with redistricting that further aids one party over another. There is already too much gerrymandering in favor of republicans that keeps unpopular candidates/incumbents in office. If there is any redistricting, it should only be to undo the map that was drawn in 2021, which perpetuated the issues mentioned above. It is my belief that the popular vote should carry greater weight, and there should be zero districting; because gerrymandering only works to dampen the voice of the people. If anyone Texas politician's actions are the will of the people, that is supported by the majority of Texans, then they should not fear the popular vote.
