Message:

Holding a special session to discuss redistricting (especially in mid-decade) is practically unprecedented, and an outrageous and shameful waste of taxpayer money. Everyone is well aware that Texas is already severely (and probably illegally) gerrymandered.

If this pushes ahead in the special session, legislatures in the large-population "blue" states are already discussing redistricting in their states, as they have every right to do.

The simple fact of the matter is that gerrymandering should not exist in ANY state in the country - be it a Republican or Democratic-led state. You, as a politician, are trying to pick your voters. In a democracy, voters choose the politicians.

Our current Texas "leadership" should strive to be an example for the entire country by refusing to engage in this ridiculous level of partisan politics.
