Message:

As a proud and engaged Texan, I am speaking out today in strong opposition to any redistricting efforts that manipulate district lines for political gain. Gerrymandering—whether partisan or racial—not only undermines the foundation of fair representation, but also threatens the very integrity of our democratic system.

Redistricting must be about ensuring equal and fair representation for all Texans—not about protecting power or silencing communities. Sadly, Texas has a history of drawing maps that marginalize voters and weaken the voices of communities of color. These unjust practices erode public confidence and violate the core values of our democracy and the legal rights of the people.

I urge every member of the Legislature and those on the redistricting committees to reject any map that suppresses voter influence, divides communities, or ignores the will of the electorate. Elected officials are meant to serve the people, not redraw the rules to secure their own power.

This process must be transparent, accountable, and centered on fairness. The people of Texas deserve maps that reflect our state's true diversity and uphold the principle that every vote counts equally.

Texas is not the property of those in power. It belongs to all of us.
