Lucy Frost. Native Texan. Born in Corpus Christi. Live in Manchaca.

I oppose the bill.

Y'all have Texans drowning in floodwater, priced out of housing, crushed by student debt, and wondering if retirement will ever be an option — and THIS is what you're spending your time on?

Maps. Again.

If this map goes through, I'll be in a district that stretches from south Travis County to the Gulf of Mexico, and down the coast to Aransas Pass. It'd take a full day to drive it.

That's not a community of interest. That's a highway system.

Let's call this what it is: a power grab. A mid-decade, billionaire-backed, Trump-requested power grab.

It's a fever dream of billionaires in West Texas, Silicon Valley, and the White House.

This isn't about Texas. It's about padding Congress with five more loyal lapdogs for a wanna be king and Epstein pal who tried to end democracy.

This plan doesn't reflect Texas. It erases it.

60% of Texans are people of color.

But only 34% of congressional districts currently allow them to elect candidates of their choice.

This plan would gut that down to just 21%.

That dog don't hunt.

You can dress it up all you want. We see what it is:

More backroom map-rigging. More voices silenced. More democracy poisoned at the altar of power.

My dad taught me that when a bully takes your lunch money once, they don't stop. They come back. Again and again.

Until you say: Back OFF.

You have a chance to be the people that back the billionaire bullies up.

Show some self respect. Tell the billionaires and the wanna-be king this is where it stops.

Don't mess with Texas maps.
