Good day,

I am writing this in hopes that the senate will realize that redistricting in the middle of a decade goes against our democratic republic. It is unprecedented for a president to call for a state to give them 5 more seats in a state that already under represents a large part of their population.

I thought Texas was against big government. I thought texas stood up for states rights and didn't cater to the federal government. The president should have no say in how any state districts are set up and the fact that our senate is even considering it shows just how corrupt our state government has gotten.

You work for the residents of Texas, not the president and the people of Texas do not want this gerrymandered redistricting in a period of time when you should be more concerned with making sure more texans don't die due to a lack of emergency warning systems.

There are far more important things for you to be doing right now than catering to a wannabe dictator who admires Hitler.

Thank you,

Maria Randall
