Message:

I'm deeply concerned about the effort to redraw Texas's congressional maps just four years after they were last revised. Redistricting is supposed to happen every ten years following the census, not whenever it's politically convenient. This feels like a blatant attempt to manipulate the system to lock in more power for one party, not to reflect the will of the people.

When maps are redrawn for partisan gain instead of fair representation, communities like mine risk being split up or silenced. This undermines trust in the democratic process and makes it more difficult for voters to hold their leaders accountable. I want my vote to count just as much as anyone else's, and this effort makes it feel like that principle is being thrown aside.

This process should be transparent, fair, and focused on ensuring that every Texan has an equal voice, not on helping any political party gain an advantage.
