Message:

This is a blatant power grab that defies the regular redistricting process. There is no census data to justify these changes. There is no precedent that would allow for this. It all hinges on the request of an out-of-state entity that wants additional seats because they know that the midterms will see a significant shift in Congress. If the other side of the political aisle attempted anything like this, you'd call for their resignation and blast them for procedural impropriety. How dare you think you can do the same without consequence or push back.
