Message:

I am deeply disappointed to hear the state legislature is taking up the redistricting process in an off-year (outside of the normal census process and when we just redistricted 4 years ago). The congressional districts should not be defined by the elected state legislatures. Instead, like a jury pool, there should be a commission of citizens, non-partisan that develops the districts using appropriate, scientific data to create districts representing the people of Texas. There are democrats, republicans, minorities, poor, rich, rural, urban -- all of these people need to feel they have a chance at a representative that reflects their local community. I completely oppose re-districting in a manner that 'by-design' elects more of one party.
