Message:

I am writing from Houston, a city that embodies the vibrant diversity and dynamism of Texas. I am strongly opposed to the proposed redistricting maps currently under consideration. These maps jeopardize fair representation and risk diminishing the voices of many Texans, particularly communities of color and working class voters, whose political influence is essential to a healthy democracy.

Houston is a microcosm of the state's diverse makeup, and redistricting should reflect this reality by ensuring equitable representation for all citizens. Instead, the current proposals appear to be driven by partisan interests, favoring incumbents and a single party rather than upholding the principle of "one person, one vote."

The proposed maps threaten to fracture cohesive communities, weaken the voting power of historically marginalized populations, and erode public trust in our electoral process. As someone who cares deeply about transparency, equity, and accountability, I urge the Legislature to reject this redistricting proposal and work towards fair maps that genuinely represent the people of Texas.

The time has come to prioritize the integrity of our democracy over political gain. Please stand with the people of Houston and the rest of Texas by ensuring our electoral maps are drawn fairly and responsibly.
