Message:
The proposed redistricting map does not reflect the true makeup or function of Texas communities. Instead, it appears to serve a national political agenda, further dividing Texans and undermining fair representation.

Texans deserve congressional districts that are geographically coherent and representative of the communities they encompass. Communities should be able to elect national representatives who understand and advocate for their local needs—not politicians chosen through manipulated district lines.

No reasonable observer could look at several of the proposed districts and genuinely claim they reflect how our communities are structured or how we live. This kind of gerrymandering is a disservice to the people of Texas and to the integrity of our democracy.
