Regarding: Congressional

Message:

The proposed redistricting in Texas isn't just a partisan power grab — it's a blatant denial of true representation for millions, especially women and gender minorities. Texas is a state built on diversity, yet its new congressional maps silence the voices of communities who deserve a seat at the table. When district lines are drawn to protect incumbency and suppress participation, we all lose — but the impact falls hardest on those already underrepresented. A fair and functioning democracy demands maps that reflect people, not political preservation. Texans deserve better than maps that erase who we are.
