Message:

The redistricting of Congressional districts in Texas, like any other state, is to occur after a census to appropriately represent population density to accurately have each person represented in congress. Redistricting in 2025, five years after the last census and four years after the appropriate time for redistricting, is not doing justice by us Texas citizens. There is no data that has been submitted that should warrant a redistricting. Many protests have occurred opposing the redistricting due to the lack of evidence that the districts need to be represented in a different manner. This call for redistricting should be called what it is, gerrymandering. This is not to better the representation of the people in congress. This is to favor the Republican party who fear losing their majority in the House. This will fartherlimit and suppress the voices of citizens who already reside in extremely gerrymandered districts in our state. I write this comment as a born and raised Texan who left this state for a few years but returned due to my deep care for this state. This call for redistricting is not for the people.
