Greetings,

We need to stop this tit for tat, back and forth, by any means necessary grab for power and ultimately world views between "red" and "blue." That every election seems to bring this massive swing back and forth from left to right and right to left ideologies makes us lose sight the collective of principles that form the backbone of our country. The central nerve running along our backbone was once the power of voting. It still is...kind of...but mutated into this "whoever wins the vote takes all!" mentality. Thus, elections have become only about winning. Whether drawing districts for Red or Blue power gains rather than gains in civic representation is the chicken or the egg is irrelevant. It simply needs to stop as it fuels the notion that there the US is only two halves with no center.

Thank you
