Message:

These performative redistricting suggestions are simply kicking the can down the road - stop trying to suppress voters. Provide them with reasonable district lines - why do some of them look so egregiously unnatural? (We know why - the policies in place don't work but nobody wants to be inconvenienced with actually doing something about it.)

Perhaps if we put this time/energy/resources into serving ALL Texans and not just those of a certain tax bracket we could move forward as a state and be in a space where we focus on what actually matters: appropriate infrastructure for the population, affordable housing, ensuring ALL children have access to regular, nutritious meals (we shouldn't even have to ask for this, yet here I am) and giving the people their voice back.

I don't relate to bought-out bootlickers and want to see the organic representation of the people of Texas and not talking heads for the 1% we (or you, dear reader!) will ever be or share the same benefits of.

Thanks for reading, and I look forward to seeing these redistricting suggestions fail to pass.
