The saying goes everything's bigger in Texas. Well, this year that statement glaringly describes the cheating the Texas government is trying to pull off. A nonsensical old man who can't even do math demands 5 more House seats and the cheating Republicans in my state legislature just say "Sure, boss man. Anything you want" and don't consider a single actual Texan that this affects. Voting has been made difficult enough with unnecessary purges, rules about how to vote, polling station changes, threats against poll workers. Then along comes a pack of Texas state Republican lawmakers who refuse to dig down to find their integrity and who just roll over to make Trump happy. Whatever happened to taking the people who elected you, whose taxes pay your salary into consideration? I used to believe saying you were a Texan stood for something good. No more. There's no dignity left, no empathy, no neighborly joy. It's all gimme gimme gimme.

I'm 72 and with every bit of wisdom my years give me I'm telling you to back off redistricting or you're going to find it coming back to bite you.
