Message:

The Texas Constitution mandates redistricting after a decennial census. This was already done following the 2020 census. The state's Attorney General has contended that what they drew post-2020 census was completely satisfactory and that Texas "led the Nation in rejecting race-based decision-making in its redistricting process."

The Governor called a special session to redraw the maps in 2025 not to make the population of each district equal, or to correct any previous failure which abridged voting rights on the basis of race/color/language group. It is clearly being done solely for the purpose of gaining advantage for the Republican party in Texas. This reprehensible ploy may not be unconstitutional, but it surely ought to be. Shame on politicians who will stop at NOTHING to win.
