Message:

I am vehemently opposed to the redistricting of Texas because it undermines the core principles of democracy—fair representation, equal voice, and the right of every citizen to be heard.

Redistricting should be about ensuring balanced, equitable representation based on population changes—not about manipulating maps to protect political power. But what’s happening in Texas is not neutral. It’s a deliberate effort to dilute the voting power of communities of color, divide historically unified districts, and silence voices that don’t align with the dominant political agenda. That is not representation. That is voter suppression, plain and simple.

As a Texan, a parent, a business owner, and a community member, I refuse to stand by while our democracy is carved up for partisan gain. These maps do not reflect the Texas I know—diverse, growing, and demanding to be heard. I stand for transparency, fairness, and maps that serve people, not politicians.

The redistricting process should be accountable to us—not rigged against us.
