Message:

As a Texan, I am deeply disappointed and disheartened. This state has not only lost its moral compass, it has lost the plot entirely.

When congressional maps are drawn not to represent the people, but to silence them, that is not democracy. That is disenfranchisement.

The refusal to create fair and representative districts is not just a political maneuver. It is a betrayal of every Texan who believes in the power of their vote, especially Black, Latino, and other communities of color who continue to be diluted and dismissed.

Even worse, too many state leaders bend the knee only when the approval of a president is at stake. They do not act for the people. They do not act for our communities. They do not act for justice. They act for proximity to power.

Redistricting should be about representation, not manipulation. Texans deserve better. We deserve maps that reflect the people of this state, not just the people in power.

I love my home. I am ashamed of the decisions being made in its name.

Do better. No one is asking for this except Donald Trump. You will have to face the voters at some point. Choose wisely. You will not be able to blame Democrats if there are none left to speak for us.
