Message:

Redistricting, at least in Texas, is a contentious process that can take years and lead to law suits. It needs to happen every ten years, after the census count, but when it is settled, it should stay settled until the next census. By reopening the process between censuses, you will just ensure continuous chaos and dissension. That will lead to more distrust in elections, something we do not need. I urge you to leave things as they are. Wait until the next census to redistrict.
