Hello, I am an Austin homeowner and am very angry about the plan to conduct mid-decade redistricting in the state. There are so many priorities I have as a voter and a Texas resident, especially given the deadly floods that just took place only an hour away from me, and wasting taxpayer time and resources on unnecessary redistricting, which would not remediate the existing issue of absolutely geographic-nonsensical districts, makes me incredibly angry. From everything I've seen, the plan to redistrict has come out of no desire to meaningful support Texas residents but comes out of veiled threats and suggestions from the President. I love this state and the people in it and am appalled that the strong state of Texas is acquiescing to the ego of one individual rather than prioritizing time, money, and resources on the 32 million Texas residents.

I urge lawmakers to wait to conduct redistricting until after the census, when it would normally take place, and instead focus this special session on public infrastructure and healthcare, things that meaningfully impact Texans on the day-to-day. Thank you.
