Message:

My name is Elsa Koval , and I'm here to speak on behalf of the countless Black, Latino, Indigenous, and Asian communities across Texas whose voting power has been repeatedly diluted through redistricting.

For decades, the lines have been drawn in ways that silence communities of color—splitting us up, packing us into a few districts, or spreading us so thin that our votes lose meaning. This is not just unfair. It is a continuation of a long, painful history of racial injustice in our state.

We are not asking for favors. We are demanding our rights—equal representation, and maps that reflect our true strength and presence in this state. Texas is growing more diverse every day. Our maps must reflect that—not ignore it, not suppress it.

Racial gerrymandering is voter suppression. And we will not allow our voices to be erased any longer.
