Message:

Texas does not need to redraw its congressional district maps more than once a decade. Districts should be drawn to fairly represent communities of interests, and voters should be free to vote for the candidate of their choice-not politicians choosing their voters. The White House is blatantly attempting to rig the 2026 midterm election in favor of the President and his agenda, even if it means silencing the voices of millions of voters who don't support the President. Ultimately, the task of redistricting should be handled by a nonpartisan commission, rather than a Legislature which can bend to whichever party is in power.
