Message:

I have some grave concerns about the intent and impact of the Congressional Redistricting being pursued by the Texas Legislature. It is very transparently a move to "cheat" on all upcoming votes in Texas. None of this redistricting would have an even effect on the votes that would come from the new district voter makeups. I live in the 18th district in Houston, and it is a pretty evenly drawn as to population makeups—white and black voters. I have no doubt that the redistricting is just a naked power grab to be able to shift voting results to benefit the Republicans who are pushing this dishonest idea. So, when did cheating like this become OK? Your children will be ashamed when they understand what their parent(s) have done. This is even worse when you consider that if this is successful, other states will try the same gimmicks. When does the dishonesty stop?
