Message:

As a resident of Houston, I am writing to strongly oppose the proposed redistricting bill. This legislation is not about fairness or representation—it's about disenfranchising voters. It undermines the voice of entire communities and manipulates district lines to protect political power rather than reflect the will of the people.

This bill directly harms voters by limiting their ability to choose representatives who actually speak for them. In a diverse and growing city like Houston, we should be expanding access to fair elections, not weakening it through gerrymandering. Drawing lines that diminish the political influence of certain groups—especially communities of color—is a clear form of voter suppression.

Even worse, this sets a dangerous national precedent. If this kind of redistricting is allowed to pass in Texas, it will only encourage Democratic-led states to respond in kind. The result will be a race to the bottom—where partisan politics matter more than people, and millions more voters across the country will lose fair representation.

Congress should be working to strengthen democracy, not tear it down. I urge you to reject this bill and protect the basic rights of all Americans, no matter where they live or who they vote for.
