Message:
To the Decision-Makers,

Your redistricting decisions are not just lines on a map. They are decisions that silence communities.

These maps dilute the voting power of Black, Brown, urban, and student populations. They split neighborhoods, separate families from their political voice, and erode trust in our democratic process.

This is not about fair representation. It's about control.

Drawing districts in back rooms, with no transparency, sends a clear message: you are more interested in power than people.

If your strategy depends on reducing voter influence, especially from communities that have historically been underrepresented, you are not protecting democracy but rather weakening it.

The impact is lasting. Every line you draw in bad faith deepens the divide between elected leaders and the people they serve. Every silenced voice chips away at the integrity of our system.

We see it. We feel it. We will remember.

Do better. Not because you're being pressured. But because Texans deserve fair maps, fair elections, and leaders who represent everyone.

Sincerely,
Jose
