Message:

Plainly put, I would like to say that the current plan to redistrict the Texas U.S. Congressional map will most likely ignite a redistricting arms race. Democratic leaning states have already stated that they will follow Texas's lead and redistrict within their states. My research indicates that Republican leaning states will lose out. In a redistricting arms race, the question I have is why? Simply because President Trump has ordered Governor Abbott and other governors to redistrict the current Congressional maps. President Trump is psychologically unwell, everyone knows that, and his regime of chaos cannot last forever. There are so many unseen and unknown secondary and tertiary effects to this planned action that have probably not been war gamed by the Texas State legislature. I highly encourage the Texas Legislature to conduct serious war games utilizing the if this/then that approach. Much is on the line, and the Texas Legislature owes the citizens of this state their due diligence in this matter.
