Message:

As a proud member of the HOPE Board, I stand firmly against the current Texas congressional redistricting plans. These maps dilute the voting power of Latino communities and undermine the very foundation of representative democracy. Texas has seen significant growth in its Latino population—growth that has driven the state’s economic and cultural vitality. Yet, instead of reflecting that reality, the proposed maps diminish Latino influence by cracking and packing our communities into districts that silence our collective voice. This is not just unfair—it is un-American. At HOPE, we believe in full and fair representation. We advocate for a political process where every vote counts and every community matters. Redistricting should be about equity, not exclusion. We urge our elected officials to reject maps that suppress Latino participation and to support a redistricting process that truly reflects the diversity and strength of Texas. Our democracy depends on it.
