Message:

The proposed redistricting to accommodate President Trump's desire to gain GOP seats in the House or Representatives is an unnecessary and unnatural attempt to curry favor with the White House. Texas lawmakers are obligated in service to our state and this effort sells out the spirit and the will of Texans. It also runs the risk of backfiring on the GOP as the administration's approval rating continues to decline.

There are more registered Democrats than Republicans in Texas and a growing bloc of independents who are not readily identified through our state elections system. Redrawing the congressional districts will not reverse the deterioration of support for Trump's agenda and will likely only alienate traditionally Republican voters and issues-based, non-party voters.

The people of Texas should be respected and accurately reflected in Congress instead of used as tokens to be thrown into political coffers in Washington.
