Message:

As a voter in Texas, I am writing to express my deep disappointment and concern over the recently proposed congressional district maps. These maps appear to prioritize political gain over the fair and equitable representation of the people they are meant to serve.

Rather than organizing districts based on shared interests, community ties, and geographic logic, the maps seem to carve up regions in a way that dilutes voices and fragments communities. It is disheartening to witness a process where citizens are treated not as individuals with needs and concerns, but as strategic pieces in a larger power struggle.

I feel that the intent behind these maps is to silence the already limited voice I have, which is my vote. When districts are drawn in ways that strip voters of meaningful influence, it undermines the very foundation of our democracy. It sends a message that power, not people, is the true priority.

This process lacks transparency, fairness, and respect for the voters of Texas. I urge the Legislature to reject these maps and pursue a redistricting approach that genuinely reflects the values of representation, accountability, and community.

Respectfully,
Mark Loovis
