I am 4th generation Texas resident and currently live in District 32, I'm deeply concerned about the way this new redistricting plan moves me into District 24. How can the needs of north central Dallas be the same as the more rural Northeast Tarrant county part of the proposed district? The short answer is it can't.

This shift isn't designed to keep communities intact — it's a political maneuver that dilutes our voices, all because national Republicans are growing less popular by the day. I believe district lines should reflect genuine communities of interest, not divide them for partisan advantage. Fair maps matter because they ensure all Texans have a real say in who represents us. I urge lawmakers to create districts that keep neighborhoods together and reflect the shared values and needs of their residents. I plan to work tirelessly to ensure that all my neighbors are registered to vote and vote in the next election. If you redraw the map, know that many other Texans will do the same.

Thank you for your time.
