Message:

I strongly oppose the proposed redistricting efforts in Texas, which appear to be driven not by fair representation but by a desire to preserve a conservative majority through gerrymandering. This manipulation of district lines undermines the foundational principles of democracy by diluting the power of voters—especially communities of color and younger, more diverse populations—who deserve equitable representation. Prioritizing political control over fair and competitive districts erodes public trust in government, weakens accountability, and violates the basic human right to have one's voice equally heard in the political process. Redistricting should reflect the evolving demographics of our state, not suppress them for partisan advantage.
