Message:

Redistricting, the drawing of new boundaries for election purposes, is just part of the election game. It is about trying to win despite the message being put out by a political party and doesn't really address the concerns and needs of the constituency in the area. It is my belief that the El Paso area, and perhaps many other areas, won't change much just because our congressional representatives are from a different party. I guess the question really being asked is "are there more of them than of us?" That's what it comes down to. Just take a look at what is happening with the mayoral race in New York. So I say go for it. Redraw the boundaries. It don't think it will really matter. But maybe El Paso could then elect someone that can think for and represent their constituents by thinking outside of the box. The behaviors displayed by many representatives is embarrassing. Maybe moving the lines will lead to El Paso changing how it is viewed nationally by being able to elect someone that trully reflects better politically educated voters. Good Luck!
