Message:

As a concerned Texan, I oppose mid-decade redistricting because it directly contradicts fundamental Republican values of limited government, fiscal responsibility, and respect for tradition and rule of law. Redrawing districts outside the normal ten-year census cycle undermines the principle of stable governance and injects unnecessary government intervention into a process that should remain predictable and orderly. It also wastes taxpayer dollars on political maneuvering rather than essential services, violating the conservative commitment to efficient, responsible use of public funds. Furthermore, tampering with district boundaries midstream erodes public trust in the democratic process, threatening the integrity of elections—a cornerstone of the constitutional republic Republicans proudly defend. I urge you to uphold these values and reject any effort to redraw district lines before the next scheduled census.
