Message:

I am writing to express my deep concern and strong opposition to the current congressional redistricting process taking place in Texas. This redistricting effort is not only unjust - it is undemocratic and unconstitutional. Instead of reflecting the true diversity and will of the people, these maps are designed to silence communities of color and manipulate political power for partisan gain.

According to the 2020 U.S. Census, 95% of Texas's population growth over the last decade came from communities of color, yet the newly drawn congressional maps actually reduce the number of districts where Black, Latino, and Asian voters have a real opportunity to elect candidates of their choice. This is a blatant attempt to dilute the political power of the very communities that are driving the state's growth and vitality and it is downright shameful.

Voters should choose their representatives, not the other way around. Fair representation is a cornerstone of our democracy, and what is happening in Texas is a betrayal of that principle. I urge lawmakers and the courts to reject these maps and restore fairness, equity, and transparency to the redistricting process.
