To anyone in the Texas Legislature that will be looking at, discussing, voting on the Redistricting (Gerrymandering) of our amazing state,

As a former resident of Fort Bend County and current resident of Williamson County, I have found that the interests of the people, of all races, religions, socio economic status, education levels, or those working toward a better community (thus creating a better Texas. Make no mistake, every institution must review what is best for the masses, not just what is beneficial for a political party, or special interests group) have not been “heard.” For years I have called both local, state (and federal legislators) with one highly scripted response. This matters especially now when instead of supporting public education, you chose to sabotage it loud and proud. You have chosen to ignore the real causes that create unsafe schools. You have chosen to ignore how to humanely work toward permanent immigration reform. You have chosen to consistently point fingers, appeasing special interests and high powered donors like Wilkes and Dunn to name two. You have chosen to grossly misunderstand natural disasters in our state and there have been far too many in the last decade alone. You have chosen to be less than truthful regarding funding of education, disaster relief (including the gross mishandling of the speed in which relief is rendered). Now, you have chosen to have discussions then rendering a decision on the irresponsible redistricting of Texas. Make no mistake, this is, as legislators, your choice to bring this forward for a potential vote. We the people, as residents of Texas who care about the essential nature of following stated guidelines and the state and nation’s Constitutions know that redistricting or gerrymandering is neither necessary or appropriate at this time. Make no mistake, this will backfire...it may not be today, tomorrow, or a decade from now, but this move will be remembered and used at another time as justifiable. And for those Texans who care about all of our fellow Texans for today and in the future, we haven’t been given the why!

Did the GOP do the gerrymandering incorrectly the 5 years ago. Are we going to hear misinformation about immigrants or dead people throughout certain parts of Texas? Being very very familiar with our political climate locally, in Texas, and federally, it appears that the why is simple. The Governor was asked/told to do this to benefit the GOP in Congress. If that is the why...say so... even if it is morally and politically corrupt. True leadership is not about puppeteering. True leadership is knowing your plan, working your plan, coaching up those you want to assist in implementing the plan. Leadership is not unilateral. It is complex, but made simple when you understand the needs of those you lead. I see no leadership going on in this Special Session. I see a one sided, unhealthy, misuse of leadership. Gerrymandering doesn't sound good. Redistricting without the why sounds weak and underhanded. I've often thought that many Texas politicians sleep far too well. In church they tell it one way, and on the streets it's all about them. It's not for me judge. It is however paramount to make my opinion about the unnecessary redistricting (I'll give you the benefit of the doubt) known. But I'm also anxious to hear about the well thought plans for safety during natural disasters, and a far, far, far better understanding of public education in my state of Texas.
