Affirm public info: I agree

Regarding: Congressional

Message:

Texas's current redistricting process appears biased—and disproportionately disadvantages areas with high populations of Black and Latino residents. President Trump is advocating for Texas Republicans to redraw the congressional map to gain as many as five additional GOP leaning seats. These proposed changes could suppress the political power of communities accounting for 95% of Texas' population growth, aggravating existing concerns about minority underrepresentation.

Mid-decade redraw:

Uncommon and aimed at political advantage during a special session

Trump's influence:

for Texas to gain five GOP-favoring seats, distorting representation

Disproportionate power:

GOP holds ~80% of delegation despite only ~56% vote share

Minority impact:

Redraw likely dilutes voting power of minority communities.
